

Project: Putting the Q into quality project management

Client: LSN / CEL / LSC
2007

Dr Bill Lockitt, QTP Ltd Managing Director, worked for some time with LSN staff and a large number of FE practitioners throughout the UK to deliver the highly successful QUILT (Quality in Information Learning Technology) national programme. At the end of the three-year programme QUILT was replaced by the LSN 'Q Projects'. Having undertaken a number of reviews of QUILT and Q projects Bill identified the need for a practical project management publication that would enable practitioners to complete complex e-learning/technology projects successfully. The publication has been well received by the sector and is still used today by LSN and Further Education to promote good project management practice.

What the LSN said about the publication

'LSN has a tradition of supporting e-learning professional development of sector staff by encouraging and funding a range of development projects. One recent example was the Q projects, which is widely regarded as a successful, innovative but quick and easy method of introducing staff to the potential of ILT in teaching and learning. This publication is for sector staff who are involved in e-learning development projects. Whatever the scale or focus or staff involved, the publication offers practical, tried and tested activities to support successful project outcomes. This publication has been jointly funded by the Centre for Excellence in Leadership (CEL) and the Learning and Skills Network (LSN).'
